Over the course of the module, students will also be introduced to various scholarly and theoretical frameworks for addressing the relationship between technology and image-making.

AH5164 The Book as Object and Idea
SCOTCAT Credits:	30	SCQF level 11	Semester	2
Academic year:	2021-2022
Planned timetable:	9.30 am - 11.00 am Thu (seminar)
People over the world use books all the time, but rarely consider them as a cultural form with a rich history and symbolism. This module will consider the book as cultural artefact, idea and symbol as well as a source of information and a vehicle for conveying the messages contained in texts and images. The target period of the course is the late middle ages (c. 1250-1500) and early modern period, when the ownership and use of books first became widespread and many of the assumptions that still condition our approach to books first emerged. We will work with a broad definition of the book, which includes accounting and commonplace books, diaries and formularies, books with fictitious and technical content, private and public books, religious and secular books, etc. The seminars will aim to develop understanding of the physical, phenomenological book, by looking closely at individual copies and considering their purposes, use, and (where relevant) provenance and descent. The aim is to explore a type of object whose importance to culture is so fundamental that its conceptual complexity is often taken for granted. The course will foreground art historical and bibliographical approaches to the book. If the lockdown eases before the end of the semester we plan to visit the University's Special Collections unit to look at a range of medieval and early modern books in the flesh. (Such visits are normally central to the course; in present circumstances digital images of original manuscripts and early printed books will have to be used more intensively than usual.)

A variety of selective studies presents ways in which classical culture was understood and exploited in different cultural environments. Broadly oriented geographically and chronologically, the module considers definitions of the classical, permutations and appropriations of classical forms and ideals, as well as changing attitudes to the classical past.

AH5166 The Image of the Artist
SCOTCAT Credits:	30	SCQF level 11	Semester	2
Academic year:	2021-2022
Planned timetable:	To be arranged.
For at least six centuries, western civilisation has viewed the visual arts as the creations of named individuals. The highest artistic achievements of an age have served as an invitation to examine the character and qualities of their makers, the artists. This module will encourage students to reflect on what it means to engage with art in this way. It will examine how the image of the artist has changed over the centuries, from the sixteenth century to the present day. Topics to be explored will include: how artists portray themselves, how they are characterized in novels, what we mean by genius, or creativity, and whether art history always needs to be structured around lifetimes, intentionality, biography and proper names.

It will explore varieties of ekphrasis, including poetic and fictional responses to works of art, as well as works of art that incorporate text. We will also address moments of 'crisis' in which the operations of criticism are called into question, and will consider the contributions that artists have made, both in resisting and in contributing to writing on art.

Planned timetable:	3.00 pm - 5.00 pm Thu (seminar)
This MLitt module will explore the complex relationship between photography and concepts of documentary and the document during the twentieth century, and into the twenty-first. It will address a range of issues and practices in relation to key socio-political events and ideas, from the emergence of documentary photography in the first half of the twentieth century, particularly in the US and Europe, through to the questioning and subversion of this legacy from the 1970s onwards, particularly in relationship to conceptual and performance art. We will address the changing relationship between photography and durational media such as film and video, as well as the impact of digital technology. By following the trajectory of various documents across the time-period, the module will enable us to address a range of geographic sites, together with photograph's role in mass reproduction and mediatisation on a global level, as well as trends in recent curatorial and exhibition practice.
