Scottish History (SC) Modules

SC1004 Kingdom, Nation, People: Scotland 1200-1603

Credits: 20.0 Semester: 2

Anti-requisites: SC1001, SC1002

Description: The four centuries between 1200 and 1603 represent a key period in Scotland's development as an independent kingdom and European nation. Within this period the mediaeval Scottish kingdom was shaped by the European aspirations of its rulers and by the sustained impact of a war for survival against English conquest. Scottish society was similarly moulded by the continuing diversity of English and Gaelic-speaking peoples and communities and by contact with European practices and ideas which shaped economy and religion. This module studies this development of a mediaeval and early modern society through an analysis of key issues and themes. These are designed to trace and examine the development of a small European kingdom in an era regarded as central in the history of state formation. The module also creates an understanding of Scotland's independent identity and traditions which form the basis for continued claims to enjoy separate status.

SC2004 Scotland, Britain and Empire, 1603 - 2000

Credits: 20.0 Semester: 2

Anti-requisites: SC2001 and SC2002

Description: This module examines Anglo-Scottish relations from the Union of the Crowns in 1603 until the end of the twentieth century. Its primary focus is to show how in spite of competing national identities the idea of Britishness developed through shared social and economic experiences and the creation of a modern political democracy. The module thus deals with the rise and fall of the industrial economy; the expansion of democracy and the political changes it triggered; and lastly, it deals with the social changes that resulted from the process of modernization, focusing most strongly on the decline of religion and the ethos of individualism. However, it also deals with the tensions and disadvantages implicit in the Union of 1707 and its aftermath, such as Jacobitism in the eighteenth century, and nationalism in the post-war decades, which from the outset presented a challenge to the stability of the Unionist settlement.

Class Hour: 2.00 pm

Teaching: Three lectures and one tutorial.

Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 50%, 2 Hour Examination = 50%

Re-Assessment: 3 Hour Examination = 100%
