Description: The Middle Ages began with the fifth-century crisis of the Roman Empire. The first half focuses on the period up to the ninth century, exploring how the West dealt with the collapse and rebuilding of empire, and how the Eastern Empire responded to the Islamic caliphate. In the second half, the module studies how the emerging certainties of the eighth century fell away and new challenges were posed by new invaders, new ideas, and changes in the structures of society. The English and Scottish realms are examined as specific examples of northern European kingdoms in the high and later Middle Ages. Attention is paid to their internal development and to issues of national identity but weight is also given to the full range of contacts between the princes and peoples of Britain and the wider world, in particular via the Church and through extensive ties with France and the Low Countries.

Credits: 20 Semester: 1

Availability: 2011-12

Description: This module provides an introduction to how and why the British nation state evolved from the separate kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland and how and why it has survived over the last three centuries. Such a project involves an analysis of the shifting relations between the component parts of the British Isles, and their overseas imperial activities, between 1500 - 2000. The core of the module is political history, broadly defined, and to facilitate more in-depth analysis of the range of factors impacting on political developments, the period is divided into four thematically coherent eras: the Reformations and the Making of Britain 1500 -1660; Britain and the Atlantic World 1660 - 1815; Industrial Britain and the Rise of Empire 1750 - 1918; the Decline and Fall of Empire: Britain in the Twentieth Century.

Scottish History (SC) Modules

SC2003 Kingdom, Nation, People: Scotland 1200-1603

Credits: 20 Semester: 1

Availability: 2010-11 only

Anti-requisites: ME1006, SC1001, SC1002, SC1004

Description: The four centuries between 1200 and 1603 represent a key period in Scotland's development as an independent kingdom and European nation. Within this period the mediaeval Scottish kingdom was shaped by the European aspirations of its rulers and by the sustained impact of a war for survival against English conquest. Scottish society was similarly moulded by the continuing diversity of English and Gaelic-speaking peoples and communities and by contact with European practices and ideas which shaped economy and religion. This module studies this development of a mediaeval and early modern society through an analysis of key issues and themes. These are designed to trace and examine the development of a small European kingdom in an era regarded as central in the history of state formation. The module also creates an understanding of Scotland's independent identity and traditions which form the basis for continued claims to enjoy separate status.

SC2004 Scotland, Britain and Empire, 1603 - 2000

Credits: 20 Semester: 2

Availability: 2010-11 only

Anti-requisites: SC2001 and SC2002

Description: This module examines Anglo-Scottish relations from the Union of the Crowns in 1603 until the end of the twentieth century. Its primary focus is to show how in spite of competing national identities the idea of Britishness developed through shared social and economic experiences and the creation of a modern political democracy. The module thus deals with the rise and fall of the industrial economy; the expansion of democracy and the political changes it triggered; and lastly, it deals with the social changes that resulted from the process of modernization, focusing most strongly on the decline of religion and the ethos of individualism. However, it also deals with the tensions and disadvantages implicit in the Union of 1707 and its aftermath, such as Jacobitism in the eighteenth century, and nationalism in the post-war decades, which from the outset presented a challenge to the stability of the Unionist settlement.
