DI1006 New Testament 1: Jesus and the Gospels
SCOTCAT Credits:	20	SCQF Level 7	Semester:	2
Academic year:	2013/4
Planned timetable:	12.00 noon
This module aims to introduce students to New Testament studies in general and to Gospel studies in particular. The general introduction will include consideration of the historical contexts of the New Testament texts, including political, socio-economic and religious factors within the Greco-Roman world and Early Judaism. The Gospels will then be studied with a view to determining the particular interests of their authors, and with a view to assessing their portraits of Jesus in relation to the historical Jesus. Continuous assessment includes the review of a popular 'historical fiction' novel assigned by the module co-ordinator.

DI1012 Living Faith
SCOTCAT Credits:	20	SCQF Level 7	Semester:	2
Academic year:	2013/4
Planned timetable:	10.00 am
Practical theology is a rich and diverse discipline that explores how Christian faith is lived in contemporary settings and what people's experiences of practicing their faith say to the theological and biblical traditions. This module introduces students to the work of a number of British and international practical theologians and aims to provide both methodological and conceptual tools for studying the inter-action of Christian expressions of faith and society. It is designed to foster skills of information gathering, critical analysis and reflection and the coherent expression of research and opinion.

DI2003 New Testament 2: Paul and the Epistles
SCOTCAT Credits:	20	SCQF Level 8	Semester:	1
Academic year:	2013/4
Planned timetable:	11.00 am
This module examines the developing theology of the New Testament, paying particular attention to the issue of unity and diversity, and to the themes of Christology and soteriology. Given the importance of Paul to the development of early Christianity, a significant proportion of the module is devoted to studying his writings and those traditionally understood to be Pauline. The distinctive contributions of other New Testament writings will then be examined, as the coherence of early Christian theology is considered.
