9.00 and 10.00 am Wed.

This module introduces students to one of the strangest works of mediaeval literature, Beowulf. The hero's struggles against monsters, and the text's depiction of pagan aristocracies and tribal warfare will be studied in close readings and thematic study against the backdrop of Anglo-Saxon literary history and poetic conventions. Key aspects studied will include monstrosity, warfare, paganism, leadership, poetic composition, early mediaeval manuscript production, and the usage of electronic tools. The module will also range widely amongst related North Sea literature (Old English poetry, Old Norse sagas, mediaeval Latin, and modern folklore). Beowulf will be read in a glossed edition and in the original; supporting material will be read in translation. Some prior experience with reading Old English (e.g. through EN2003) is useful, but not necessarily required. (Group A)

This module will survey a representative sample of modernist fiction and poetry, providing an opportunity for the in-depth study of key conceptual shifts and formal innovations in modernist literature. Thematically, it will take as its central focus the question of how the modernist desire to break with the past and 'make it new' existed alongside an on-going interest in tradition and the past. We will consider topics such as Imagism and classicism; modernist uses of myth; the modernist pastoral; modernism and memory; exile and imagined return; and the anticipatory nostalgia of the 1930s. A diverse and contested field, postcolonialism explores a world transformed by European exploration, exploitation and empire-building. This course examines literary representations of this world and will introduce students to a range of key texts, critical debates and theoretical concepts in postcolonial studies. Focusing, in particular (but not exclusively), on the legacies of the British empire, we will explore the work of writers from across Africa, the Caribbean, India and Britain in order to question the ways in which postcolonial literature and theory challenges our understanding of race, class, gender, language and the individual. How has the history of empire shaped the world in which we live? In what ways have writers responded to the pressures to both commemorate the colonial past and move beyond it? And, what role can literature play in the attempt to challenge the historical and political injustices of our postcolonial world? (Group E)

What and where is Scotland? How have the cities and the countryside of Scotland been created over the last 200 years? And what are the internal and external borders of Scottish literature – psychologically, geographically and formally? By exploring Scottish novels – and poetry – from the early 19th century to the present day we examine the literary construction and deconstruction of Scotland through depictions of its rural and urban spaces. In particular, we analyse dystopian and utopian fantasies, green and gothic tendencies, and nostalgia both for the lost idyllic countryside and for gritty, urban 'reality', to ask if Scotland as a literary construction makes sense – and if it needs to. On this module students will study the relationship between Old English literary culture and the modern imagination. Poems, novels and films from the nineteenth to the twenty-first centuries will be studied alongside Old English 'sources' such as Beowulf and Bede, and students will produce their own examples of Anglo-Saxonist creative work as well as investigating that of writers from Wordsworth to Heaney. The module focuses on literary technique, as well as on the history and ideology of Anglo-Saxonism. It is recommended that students have previously taken an Old English beginner's course (such as EN2003), as Old English texts are studied rigorously in the original language. (Group A)

Christianity has always incorporated within its beliefs and institutions an inbuilt expectation of the End of Time, as brought about by the Second Coming of Christ and the Day of Judgment. On this module students will examine the expression of that apocalyptic expectation in a number of literary genres in English, including Biblical texts, chronicles, homilies, and poems from the early medieval period. These texts sometimes include colourful depictions of hell, the Antichrist, and dragons in the sky, but can also be intensely political, as well as theologically involved. Students will translate and study these works in Old English (or Anglo-Saxon) and Early Middle English. Previous experience with this language is necessary. (Group A)

This module explores the idea of 'courtly literature' through detailed study of some of the most influential poems in Middle English. Alongside Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, students might read works such as Gower's Confessio Amantis, Sir Gawain and the Green Knight or The Floure and the Leafe. The aim of the module is to study fewer, larger texts in greater depth, allowing students to get to grips with the depth and complexity of these canonical works and the literary-critical issues they raise. A central critical issue to be explored is the heated modern debate over the notion of 'courtly love'. (Group A)

| Planned timetable: | 2.00 pm Tue and 2.00 pm Thu. |               |           |   |  |

The Reformation and Renaissance in English saw shifts in thinking about the place of sexuality and gender in society. Married chastity was spiritually elevated over monastic celibacy, and a classical tradition of temperate control of appetites competed with a Christian tradition of condemning all non-procreative sex. At the same time, this 'Renaissance of chastity' constrained women as imaginative writers. This module will examine the representation of sexuality and gender in poems, prose and drama by men and women in the period 1580 - 1660, focusing on such issues as the transvestite stage, the rhetorical concept of 'manly' style, interpretations of Genesis, the ideology of friendship and transformations in the traditions of love poetry. Approaching literature by way of the law can transform our thinking about how stories are told, what constitutes 'proof' or 'probability', and how, imaginatively speaking, we gain access to, or reconstruct, the intentions of others (and even our own). In early modern England, the Latin rhetorical treatises used to teach students how to write compelling narratives and invent poetic arguments had originally been designed as treatises for advocates, so there was a very direct connection between legal and fictional techniques for telling stories and imagining motives and 'facts' (as disputed actions were called in English law). This module will explore works of drama and poetry that have strong affinities with legal forms of argument, and will encourage critical thinking about the relations between literary and legal ways of thinking in all periods. During the English Renaissance it was widely understood that literature ought to 'instruct by pleasing'. This module is concerned with those writers and texts that seem to ignore this imperative. Why, we will ask, do writers from John Donne to Alexander Pope go out of their way to challenge or baffle or confuse or overwhelm their readers? What are the forms, conditions, and uses of literary complexity? This module might alternatively be called 'How To Read Hard Renaissance Texts.' Likely authors studied will include Donne, Marvell, Cavendish, Milton, Dryden, Swift, Pope. (Group B)

This module explores poetry, prose and drama from the reign of Henry VIII through to the early years of Elizabeth I's rule. It will examine the remodelling of literary forms in a period of religious and political 'reformation', combining broad cultural and historical perspectives with in-depth textual analysis. Key texts include: More's Utopia; the poetry of Wyatt, Surrey and Skelton; early sixteenth-century religious verse; and the allegorical drama Everyman. Students will have the opportunity to write on the reception of this period in film, novels, the visual arts, etc. (Group B)

This module will examine the six major novels of Jane Austen in the context of novels by three of her contemporaries, Mary Wollstonecraft, Maria Edgeworth and Ann Radcliffe. It aims to encourage an understanding of Austen's work in the light of Romantic period aesthetics and politics and to explore Austen's affinities with and departures from the novelistic conventions of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. The module will also consider critical and theoretical approaches to Austen's writing and selected contemporary translations of Austen's work through recent screen adaptations of her novels. # EN4399 Dissertation in English SCOTCAT Credits: 30 SCQF Level 10 Semester: 1 Academic year: 2013/4 Planned timetable: 9.00 am Fri.

This module provides an opportunity to undertake a sustained piece of independent work, on a topic chosen by the student in consultation with a member of the School, leading to the presentation of an essay not more than 10,000 words in length. The dissertation may consist of a critical discussion or of a project based on the extensive collection of electronic texts currently available to the School. It will involve personal reading and research and will develop a range of skills, including investigative reading, use of information technology, the exploitation of library and internet resources, and the organisation and presentation of evidence and argument. Guidance will be given on scholarly conventions and basic research methods. This module will analyse social, cultural and literary formations through the medium of popular fiction. It offers a contrast to the twentieth century canon, and students will be encouraged to interrogate prevailing attitudes towards and representations of gender and sexuality. The module will also focus on the reappropriation of the genre by contemporary gay, lesbian and feminist writers. Among authors studied will be Agatha Christie, Dorothy L. Sayers, Raymond Chandler, Sara Paretsky and Ian Rankin. (Group E)

This module is based on the close study of a selection of the prose fiction, poetry and autobiographical writings of Thomas Hardy. Students will examine Hardy's position as a regional writer, his relation to 'realism', and his representation of women and sexuality; the features, thematic and formal, which have made him a major influence on twentieth-century poetry; and the relevance of (auto)biographical and historical questions to the study of his work. The module will introduce students to a range of issues in social, literary and intellectual history, and to the use and evaluation of some recent developments in critical theory. (Group E)

The writings of Virginia Woolf have had a major impact on the development of the English novel this century. This module involves detailed study of Woolf's most important fictional texts, and also considers her contribution to literary criticism and feminism through readings of selected extracts from her essays and diaries. The development of critical and communication skills through written and oral assignments will be an integral part of the module. (Group E)

A persuasive school of thought believes that the study of poetry can be greatly enhanced by learning how to write in such long-lived and basic forms as the sonnet as well as acquiring a practical knowledge of versification. Similarly, an understanding of fiction can be enhanced by an awareness of different approaches to narrative, dialogue and characterisation. Poetry and fiction will therefore be studied from these practical and technical perspectives in alternate weeks. (Group E)

This module provides an introduction to American fiction published between the end of the Civil War and the start of the Second World War. The module encourages students to evaluate the relationship between historical events (including Reconstruction, the 'Jazz Age', the Depression) and American literary movements and genres including the romance, the realist novel, the 'lost generation', the Harlem Renaissance and Southern Gothic. The module is centrally concerned with the conception and representation of American identity in fiction, and with heterogeneous definitions of 'the American novel'. These topics are considered in relation to the historical, social and geographical contexts of ten set texts. (Group E)

EN4422 Poetic Language SCOTCAT Credits: 30 SCQF Level 10 Semester: 2 Academic year: 2013/4 Planned timetable: 11.00 am - 1.00 pm , 12 noon Thu

This module focuses on the history of thinking about poetic language, primarily in English-language traditions. Its core will be the study of twentieth- and twenty first-century theories of poetic language, but it will draw on theoretical and literary texts from the fourteenth century onwards. Poetic language is a contested topic in various established and emerging disciplines: literary linguistics, post-structuralist theory, philosophy of language, cognitive poetics, practice-led research. This module will draw together the study of poetic language from these various perspectives, and enable students to apply their theoretical studies to a wide range of poetic texts, and to appreciate how those texts complicate theoretical work. The module will help to bridge the gaps between different ways of studying poetry in the university context – theoretical, scholarly, creative. (Group E)

EN4423 Material Culture in Victorian and Modernist Fiction SCOTCAT Credits: 30 SCQF Level 10 Semester: 1 Academic year: 2013/4

3.00 - 5.00 pm Thu

Planned timetable:

This module will use material culture studies as a lens through which to consider the continuities and ruptures between Victorian and modernist attitudes towards material culture and the ways in which attitudes towards the material informed the stylistic choices of fiction writers in these periods. Victorian novelists typically filled their works with detailed descriptions of physical environments and objects in order to create the 'solidity of specification' characteristic of realist fiction; modernist writers rejected this method as 'materialist' and sought alternatives to the solidity of the triple-decker novels of the Victorians. However, this module will question such easy distinctions and consider both differences and continuities between Victorian and modernist writers' fascination with and suspicion of things. Authors studied may include Elizabeth Gaskell, Charles Dickens, Arthur Conan Doyle, E M Forster, and Virginia Woolf. (Group E)

In an era of globalisation who 'speaks' the nation-state? How do communities negotiate their borders? Who 'belongs' and who decides? This module explores the changing nature of the nation-state and cultural expressions of belonging in the wake of decolonisation, independence, revolution and globalisation. Exploring a diverse range of texts drawn from across the globe, we will question the significance of 'world literature' and its relation to postcolonialism, 'cosmopolitanism' and national literatures. From the Haitian Revolution, independence movements, the Biafran war, Trujillo's Dominican dictatorship and the 'parsley massacre' to tourism and globalisation, this course is an opportunity to reflect on the pressures facing our global imagined communities in the late twentieth and twenty-first centuries.

EN4425 Celtic Modernisms SCOTCAT Credits: 30 SCQF Level 10 Semester: 1 Academic year: 2013/4

10.00 am Tue and 11.00 am Thu.

How exclusive a club is modernism? Did Scottish and Irish cultural nationalism inform and trouble 'modernist' writing? And what role did writers from the 'Celtic fringe' of the British archipelago play in reinvigorating and reconfiguring the literary canon in the period between 1914 and 1939? By analysing a diverse range of texts from Scottish, Irish and (Anglo-)Welsh writers – from formal as well as socio-political perspectives – we will explore alternative views of the Modernist period: in particular we will examine the relationship between the Irish Literary Revival and the Scottish Renaissance, and between the Celtic periphery and the metropolitan centre, and also the ways the writers studied turned the English language, and its hierarchies and traditions, back on itself.
